

Report No. ABTR/RD/RR-94/05	Subject Area	Project No. 93008	Report Date March 1995
Title A Literature Review on the Effects of Fly Ash in Concrete			Type of Report Final
Author(s) Ken J.A. Christison			No. of Pages 14 pages, 3 tables, 8 figures
Performing Organization Name and Address Research and Development Alberta Transportation and Utilities Twin Atria Building 4999 – 98 Avenue Edmonton, Alberta T6B 2X3		Sponsoring Agency Name and Address Research and Development Alberta Transportation and Utilities Twin Atria Building 4999 – 98 Avenue Edmonton, Alberta T6B 2X3
Supplementary Notes While every effort has been made to confirm the accuracy of the information contained herein, several references cited in this report could not be obtained for verification. This should be borne in mind when reviewing the report and before any decisions are made based on it.
Abstract Fly ash is becoming a major part of the mix design for the application of concrete. The primary objective of this report is to introduce the general behaviour of concrete when a percentage of cement is replaced by fly ash. This includes the effects fly ash has on the placement of fresh concrete, the setting of concrete, and the durability of hardened concrete.			